Experienced Sales + Customer Service
The key...great customer service. We love the marine industry and one of our core missions is to help raise the customer service bar in this industry.

However, the internet has completely transformed the way we do business. While traditional sales principles still very much apply (such as building a solid relationship with the customer, earning their trust, adding value, customer qualification, etc), how you get there is now very different. It used to be that a customer valued a solid handshake and an honest smile. The first Hunter 33 was built in 1977 and designed by John Cherubini of Hunter Marine (USA). Its simple hull design, a fin keel with spade rudder, has proven the test of time as a reliable, relatively fast hull with unmatched stability and handling.

The masthead sloop design appeals to many sailors which is why the Hunter 33 is so popular. This particular Hunter 33 looks particularly good. The seller says she's been in the water almost 2 years and was removed twice for a haul and wash and bottom paint.

An original Hunter headsail has been newly luffed and is ready to be installed. Currently, there are two good main sails.

There is a working RayMarine nav/GPS which is tied into the autopilot and a solar panel.

The original Yanmar engine is reliable and operates well.

Below deck needs repairs and is a work in progress.
